The Canadian Journal of Cardiology is the official publication of the Canadian Cardiovascular Society.

Now in its 26th year of publishing peer-reviewed medical information, The Canadian Journal of Cardiology is the most important source of Canadian medical information for specialists, cardiologists and general practitioners interested in cardiology, including those who are high prescribers in this category.

The Journal's content includes annual Position Papers, CCS Consensus Reports, original clinical and basic science articles, unique case reports, and topical commentaries and editorials.

Abstracts for all articles are published in English and French, and each of the ten journal issues includes a Calendar of Events section for important upcoming meetings.

Readership (PMB Medical Media Study 2009)

- Readership among cardiologists is 78%
