About the Journal

The Canadian Journal of Respiratory Therapy (CJRT) is a quarterly, peer-reviewed publication. The Journal publishes articles that describe effective interventions that increase access to and quality of clinical respiratory health interventions, including the organization and delivery of care in hospitals, the community, and throughout the continuum of care by health care providers. The goal is to generate evidence and discussion to support more effective and equitable access to respiratory therapy and care for patients in Canada and around the world. While many contributors are respiratory therapists, the Journal welcomes submissions from all related health professionals and researchers.
