

Current Research: Integrative Medicine

About the Journal

Current Research: Integrative Medicine is an English language, open-access, peer review journal providing an intellectual platform for international scholars in the interdisciplinary field of Integrative Medicine, which combines conventional Western medicine with alternative or complementary treatments, whose primary language may not be English. The expert Pulsus Group editorial team will work with authors to have their high-quality research published in an English language journal. The mission remains constant – to publish, promote and disseminate the work of medical researchers in a manner that exemplifies the highest standards in research integrity.
