Holistic approach to Ethics

Rajneesh Kumar

Medical ethics are the one which are most important issue as there are conflict of interests between the government and medical institutions, between medical institutions and medical personnel, between physicians and patients with courts and media playing their roles. So there should be holiness towards ethics may it be personal, familial, social, professional or spiritual as media and courts are playing their roles.

In Doctor-patient relationships honesty & integrity, mutual respect, trust, empathy and mutual goals are very important. As a doctor one should know that our profession is one of the noblest professions since ancient times as it takes care of a person from its conception to whole life till last breath on this planet. Due to this reason doctors are regarded as next to God by society. So when a patient comes to you treat him like own mother, father, son or daughter irrespective of caste, creed, race and social status of patient.

Morality of many doctors is compromised because of greed for money and that is responsible for moral degradation and other troubles of consumer courts or laws depending upon country you live.

Sushruta and Charak were Godly reverence in their lifetime. They were neither wealthy nor very rich. Why can’t we become Charak and Sushruta now days? We are the same but our desires and greed has increased. God does not desire anything from anyone in this universe.

MAN – DESIRE = DOG
MAN + DESIRE = GOD

Teaching ethics effects attitude of medical professionals [1,2]. So ethics training should be important subject during medical school and residency, including surgical residency [3,4]. And guidelines should be developed for ethics in clinical teaching and surgical residency programmes [4,5,6].

In Surgery we deal with confidential issues like, history, behavior, body, ethics in clinical teaching and surgical residency programmes [4,5,6].

Any breach of ethical standards leaves harmful effects shaking the manhood of many doctors. We are the same but our desires and greed has increased. God does not desire anything from anyone in this universe.

MORALITY

A good surgeon has high ethical standards. Never bring feeling of doership i.e. ego in you. Remember our body work automatically by HIS power. So, doer is God’s power and not you.

Results are not in our hands. We make the wounds as surgeon and god heals it. So don’t guaranty 100% outcome of any treatment or surgery and sometime results are not in our hands. We make the wounds as surgeon and god heals it. So don’t guaranty 100% outcome of any treatment or surgery and sometime results are not in our hands.

Never forget to document all discussions with patient and relatives on place where there are better chances of treatment and safety of life.

Never criticize your professional colleague as it will bring very bad reputation to you, as patient understands your motive and ultimately reflects your morality.

In Doctor-patient relationships honesty & integrity, mutual respect, trust, empathy and mutual goals are very important. As a doctor one should always be at receiving end with trust in doctor & expect high ethical standards.

Any breach of ethical standards leaves harmful effects shaking the confidence in the system, so one should have a Holistic approach towards patients by maintaining the ethical standards to prevent media and legal implications.

One should follow the four basic principles of ethics concerned with Doctors [7]-

• Autonomy
• Beneficence
• Non maleficence

ALWAYS REMEMBER DIVINE LAWS:-

“GIVE THE BEST YOU HAVE. THE BEST SHALL COME BACK TO YOU”

“What you sow, that shall you reap”

CONCLUSIONS

CPA and other legal laws according to country where we live has done irrepairable damage of doctor-patient relationship. Law can never infuse emotional feelings in human relations and due to this reason both doctor and patient suffers.

Doctor should never offend others with ill-chosen remarks about race, sexuality and other sensitive matters and try to see God in every creature and everywhere.

Have good communication with patient and relatives with emotional touch and sympathy.

Medical ethical courses should be designed for surgeons throughout the world and more sessions should be created in conferences for presentations on ethics

Surgeons must know their anatomy, learn to incise, cut and suture so that it becomes second nature. The Spanish poet Gabriel Garcia Lorca referred to the knife as a “Fish without scales” that penetrates deep into flesh [8].

Hospital Ethics Committees are must in institutes, ethics awareness programmes, and reports in the media asking for ethics to be made a mandatory part of curricula.

In many countries we are grappling on the basic questions of ethical professional practice.
